Arbitration

Arbitration involves the process of utilising your expertise to hear a dispute between parties. These hearings can often be informal. However, the arbitrator will need to have the confidence to decide how to settle the dispute and make sure the decision is final and binding on the parties.

You can practice Arbitration quicker and in a more cost-effective manner with Lexis®PSL Arbitration. It is the arbitrator, not the parties, who renders the terms and conditions of the dispute resolution. With LexisPSL Arbitration, you will have access to short, concise practice notes that cover the key issues and processes across domestic, institutional, international and industry-specific arbitration. If you need deeper research, you can simply access Lexis®Library* through direct links.

LexisPSL Arbitration contains a range of precedents and case studies with detailed drafting notes, direct links through to cases, legislation and relevant commentary. It provides alerts for relevant news updates in local and international arbitration as well as bespoke 'so what' analysis - letting you know what it means to your clients and suggested succeeding steps; all drafted by our in-house professional Arbitration experts.
